William Ford was born February 16, 1858, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, son of Martin Ford Sr. and Zibiah Meriba Stoker. pioneers of Utah in 1862. He married Eliza Ann Gurr on November 22, 1892, the marriage being later solemnized in the Salt Lake Temple. Eliza was the daughter of James Enoch Gurr and Margaret Maria Davis and was born December 3, 1868, at Midway, Utah. William died at his home May 19, 1941, and Eliza Ann died at her home November 17, 1956. Both are buried in Wallsburg Cemetery.

William was only four years old when he came with his parents across the plains, and the only mishap the Ford family had was during the middle of their journey, when he was riding with his feet hanging over the front end-gate of the wagon. The front wheels went into a ditch, throwing William out and down between the horses in such a way that one of the front wheels ran over his finger, cutting it open. It later healed. After they arrived they lived in Provo a long time. Later the family moved to Round Valley and homesteaded.

William and his brother John owned a ranch on the Green River, near what was then called Blake. But due to the activities of outlaws who were traveling through that country, rounding up their cattle and driving them off, they became discouraged and homesick. They gave up their ranch and, bringing what cattle they had left, returned to Wallsburg.

William was a strong, robust young man. A stockman and farmer, he prided himself in raising a good grade of Hereford cattle. He loved the good earth and the wide-open range and owned one of the best farms in the valley. William was a musician, playing the violin for dances and singing in the Church choir when a young man.

In 1903 he was appointed to the office of road supervisor. He was a board member of the Wallsburg Cattle Assn. many years and a board member on the Main and Hobble Creek Irrigation Companies. He was president of the town board four years, and president of the Wallsburg school board 12 years, serving faithfully and effectively until the Wallsburg School consolidated with the rest of the county. He also served as president of the Republican party.

William was a carpenter and maker of coffins, which were works of art and strongly built. Eliza helped trim the coffins and made burial clothes. He never charged for his work and many times he has furnished the lumber to make the coffins and the boxes to put them in. He also furnished some of the bricks to make the vaults. These he would also help lay. At one time he had sufficient bricks to build a brick home, but instead of for a home, a great many were used for vaults in the cemetery.

William and Eliza Ann loved this little valley of Wallsburg, with its fertile soil and high towering mountains, and its people, who were all their friends. They lived here all their married lives.

Eliza Ann was a lovely and gracious lady and a devoted helpmate to her husband, always carrying her full share of the load. She was a comfort and an inspiration to her family. She was active in Church and social activities and was known for her hospitality, and was loved by all who knew her.

Their children: Leone, Myrtle, William Dewey, Gertrude, Parley Albert and Earl.

William Ford was born February 16, 1858, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, son of Martin Ford Sr. and Zibiah Meriba Stoker, pioneers of Utah in 1862. He married Eliza Ann Gurr on November 22, 1892, the marriage being later solemnized in the Salt Lake Temple. Eliza was the daughter of James Enoch Gurr and Margaret Maria Davis and was born December 3, 1868, at Midway, Utah. William died at his home May 19, 1941, and Eliza Ann died at her home November 17, 1956. Both are buried in Wallsburg Cemetery.

William was only four years old when he came with his parents across the plains, and the only mishap the Ford family had was during the middle of their journey, when he was riding with his feet hanging over the front end-gate of the wagon. The front wheels went into a ditch, throwing William out and down between the horses in such a way that one of the front wheels ran over his finger, cutting it open. It later healed. After they arrived they lived in Provo a long time. Later the family moved to Round Valley and homesteaded.

William and his brother John owned a ranch on the Green River, near what was then called Blake. But due to the activities of outlaws who were traveling through that country, rounding up their cattle and driving them off, they became discouraged and

homesick. They gave up their ranch and, bringing what cattle they had left, returned to Wallsburg.

William was a strong, robust young man. A stockman and farmer, he prided himself in raising a good grade of Hereford cattle. He loved the good earth and the wide-open range and owned one of the best farms in the valley. William was a musician, playing the violin for dances and singing in the Church choir when a young man.

In 1903 he was appointed to the office of road supervisor. He was a board member of the Wallsburg Cattle Assn. many years and a board member on the Main and Hobble Creek Irrigation Companies. He was president of the town board four years, and president of the Wallsburg school board 12 years, serving faithfully and effectively until the Wallsburg School consolidated with the rest of the county. He also served as president of the Republican party.

William was a carpenter and maker of coffins, which were works of art and strongly built. Eliza helped trim the coffins and made burial clothes. He never charged for his work and many times he has furnished the lumber to make the coffins and the boxes to put them in. He also furnished some of the bricks to make the vaults. These he would also help lay. At one time he had sufficient bricks to build a brick home, but instead of for a home, a great many were used for vaults in the cemetery.

William and Eliza Ann loved this little valley of Wallsburg, with its fertile soil and high towering mountains, and its people, who were all their friends. They lived here all their married lives.

Eliza Ann was a lovely and gracious lady and a devoted helpmate to her husband. always carrying her full share of the load. She was a comfort and an inspiration to her family. She was active in Church and social activities and was known for her hospitality, and was loved by all who knew her.

Their children: Leone, Myrtle, William Dewey, Gertrude, Parley Albert and Earl.

WILLIAM FORD AND ELIZA ANN GURR FORD

William Ford was born February 16. 1858, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, son of Marneers of Utah in 1862. He married Eliza Ann Gurr on November 22, 1892, the marwas born December 3, 1868, at Midway. Utah. William died at his home May 19, riage being later solemnized in the Salt Lake Temple. Eliza was the daughter of James Enoch Gurr and Margaret Maria Davis and 1941, and Eliza Ann died at her home November 17, 1956. Both are buried in Wallsin Ford Sr. and Zibiah Meriba Stoker, piohurg Cemetery.

After they arrived they lived in Provo a long time. Later the family moved to Round he was riding with his feet hanging over the front end-gate of the wagon. The front during the middle of their journey, when wheels went into a ditch, throwing William William was only four years old when he the only mishap the Ford family had was out and down between the horses in such a way that one of the front wheels ran over came with his parents across the plains, and his finger, cutting it open. It later healed. Valley and homesteaded.

William and his brother John owned a country, rounding up their cattle and drivranch on the Green River, near what was then called Blake. But due to the activities of outlaws who were traveling through that ng them off, they became discouraged and bringing what cattle they had left, returned homesick. They gave up their ranch and. to Wallsburg.

ing the violin for dances and singing in the Church choir when a young man. open range and owned one of the best farms A stockman and farmer, he prided himself tle. He loved the good earth and the widein the valley. William was a musician, playin raising a good grade of Hereford cat-William was a strong, robust young man.

In 1903 he was appointed to the office ber of the Wallsburg Cattle Assn. many years and a board member on the Main and Hobble Creek Irrigation Companies. He was president of the town board four years, and president of the Wallsburg school board of road supervisor. He was a board mem-the rest of the county. He also served as until the Wallsburg School consolidated with president of the Republican party.

work and many times he has furnished the lumber to make the coffins and the boxes to put them in. He also furnished some of the bricks to make the vaults. These he William was a carpenter and maker of would also help lay. At one time he had instead of for a home, a great many were built. Eliza helped trim the coffins and made burial clothes. He never charged for his sufficient bricks to build a brick home, but coffins, which were works of art and strongly used for vaults in the cemetery.

William and Eliza Ann loved this little valley of Wallsburg, with its fertile soil who were all their friends. They lived here and high towering mountains, and its people. all their married lives.

Eliza Ann was a lovely and gracious lady She was a comfort and an inspiration to her family. She was active in Church and social activities and was known for her hospitality, and was loved by all who knew her. and a devoted helpmate to her husband. always carrying her full share of the load.

Their children: Leone, Myrtle, William Dewey, Gertrude, Parley Albert and Earl.

12 years, serving faithfully and effectively

burg Cemetery. vember 17, 1956. Both are buried in Wallswas born December 3, 1868, at Midway, Ulah. William died at his home May 19, 1858, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, son of Mar-tin Ford Sr. and Zibiah Meriba Stoker, pio-Enoch Gurr and Margaret Maria Davis and Temple. Eliza was the daughter of James neers of Utah in 1862. 1941, and Eliza Ann died at her home No-Ann Gurr on November 22, 1892, the mar-William Ford was born February 16 He married Eliza

After they arrived they lived in Provo a a way that one of the front wheels ran over out and down between the horses in such wheels went into a ditch, throwing William long time. Later the family moved to Round his finger, cutting it open. It later healed. he was riding with his feet hanging over the front end-gate of the wagon. The front during the middle of their journey, when Valley and homesteaded. the only mishap the Ford family had was came with his parents across the plains, and William was only four years old when he ing them off, they became discouraged and of outlaws who were traveling through that country, rounding up their cattle and drivranch on the Green River, near what was then called Blake. But due to the activities William and his brother John owned a

A stockman and farmer, he prided himself in raising a good grade of Hereford cattle. He loved the good earth and the wide-open range and owned one of the best farms in the valley. William was a musician, playbringing what cattle they had left, returned to Wallsburg. homesick. They gave up their ranch and William was a strong, robust young man ing the violin for dances and singing in the Church choir when a young man.

In 1903 he was appointed to the office of road supervisor. He was a board member of the Wallsburg Cattle Assn. many president of the Republican party. 12 years, serving faithfully and effectively until the Wallsburg School consolidated with and president of the Wallsburg school board was president of the town board four years, years and a board member on the Main and Hobble Creek Irrigation Companies. He the rest of the county. He also served as would also help lay. At one time he had sufficient bricks to build a brick home, but to put them in. He also furnished some of the bricks to make the vaults. These he instead of for a home, a great many were lumber to make the coffins and the boxes work and many times he has furnished the burial clothes. He never charged for his built. Eliza helped trim the coffins and made coffins, which were works of art and strongly William was a carpenter and maker of

used for vaults in the cemetery.
William and Eliza Ann loved this little valley of Wallsburg, with its fertile soil all their married lives. and high towering mountains, and its people, who were all their friends. They lived here

Eliza Ann was a lovely and gracious lady

She was a comfort and an inspiration to her family. She was active in Church and and a devoted helpmate to her husband pitality, and was loved by all who knew her. always carrying her full share of the load. Their children: Leone, Myrtle, William Dewey, Gertrude, Parley Albert and Earl. social activities and was known for her hos-